

I do not believe that the FCC should implement a law that lessens the protection Indiana residents are already receiving under the Telephone Privacy Act. As the attorney general has explained it, the bill proposed by the FCC would allow companies to contact established customer. This would severely compromise the purpose of the privacy act, which is to prevent businesses from making unsolicited calls to private individuals. And, there is no need to enact laws that allow for businesses to contact established customers, as established customers can easily contact the businesses themselves if they are interested in learning about additional or different services/products. Please allow Indiana residents to continue to have evenings free of telemarketing phone calls asking individuals to purchase unwanted services or products. Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.
